"Astrology can be understood as a 'living, dynamic, archetypal, metaphysical science', in large measure because the planets are ever in motion. We can do our best to capture the meaning and significance of any given moment, as with a photograph of live events. Yet, the continuum is just that, ongoing and never ending." ~ Michael O'Connor

Tip of the Week:

As the Moon approaches the final quarter on Sunday, September 14, revealing the ever-interesting light of the half-moon, it will disintegrate to total darkness once again. What is interesting about the New Moon is that it is completely dark, symbolic of completely Yin to us here on Earth, yet the 'dark side of the Moon' is totally illumined, ignited by the solar light, inseminated by the Yang force of the Sun. This is why the New Moon constitutes a 'seed event'.

Beyond mere phenomenology, its destined influence is measurable based on the positions of the planets from our perspective here on Earth, in turn constituting a unique whole that was never experienced before, not will even be again, just as is true of a newborn child. Similar yet distinctly unique, every New Moon 'embodies' a distinctly unique theme of destiny.

Learning Astrology by way of the Moon reveals a relationship between Sun, Moon and Earth and is among the best ways to learn, because it invites observation, and not just conceptual understanding. The coming New Moon that occurs on September 21, the day prior to Autumn Equinox, is the second of two in Virgo, but....this one will be at the critical 29th degree of Virgo 06 minutes, and is a Solar Eclipse, which makes it that much more special, and impactful. Although it is a 'Partial Eclipse' it does not deter from the fact that it is an eclipse and, therefore, qualifies as a true 'Super Moon'.

Its basic, general, destined influence for each sign is the focus of this week's Horoscope.

Have a great week!

Horoscope for the Week:

Aries (Mar 21 – Apr 20)

This Solar Eclipse is destined to have a direct impact on your relationship life and your lifestyle in general, and how these are intimately connected. The basic message is the importance of giving fully. This could amount to giving more, but maybe you already give a lot. The flipside is the return, which should be a balanced reciprocation of your contributions.

Taurus (Apr 20 – May 21)

Health is that word that is core to the word 'success'. Success without health, at least mental and especially emotional happiness, is not really success. It may be achievement, but what is its value? Assessing how you can feel more fulfilled is a central theme associated with these eclipses, both the recent lunar and now the coming solar.

Gemini (May 21 – Jun 21)

Creating beauty can be deemed a spiritual activity. Aspiring to emulate the endless beauty of nature, yet in a personal way and close to home is a natural desire. Of course, all things take time, and other investments too, the most important of which is your heart. So, be patient with the process and do it for love above all.

Cancer (Jun 21 – Jul 22)

Changes close to home can be expected subject to this eclipse couplet. That home is where your heart is, literally, is worth considering. It is an interesting notion that we do not live 'in the world' so much as in our own mind, is worth considering. Of course, your mind includes how you feel. A golden key in this regard is to count your blessings.

Leo (Jul 22 – Aug 23)

Nurturing new perspectives, strategies and approaches is a feature of this eclipse season. It comes down to getting clear on your values and priorities. Suffering often comes from lack of clarity, confusion, indecision and subsequent procrastination, frustration and even depression. Focus to identify what you want and clarify how to achieve it.

Virgo (Aug 23 – Sep 22)

Two back-to-back New Moon's in your sign and a Total Lunar Eclipse in Pisces in between, point to changes on relationships fronts. These need not be epic, dramatic and painful, but they do indicate both feelings and events that will shift your perspective at least, and possibly your approach and lifestyle.

Libra (Sep 22 – Oct 22)

Deepening the relationship with yourself can be accurately understood as a spiritual process. However, it can simply be about making needed adjustments to feel more aligned, healthier and happier. Directing your focus to what you want and feel you need is not selfish, because if you are happier, significant others are likely to be as well.

Scorpio (Oct 22 – Nov 21)

Clarifying your dreams in the context of practicality and realism is extra important now. This implies the need to cooperate with people and circumstances rather than trying to force them as a means of control. True control is self-control, and it is also described as 'emotional self-mastery'. Doing so is supported by choosing to be your own best friend.

Sagittarius (Nov 21 – Dec 21)

Knowing your own mind is much easier said than done. Determining what you think, believe and value and why, constitutes an adventurous journey to achieve true knowledge and wisdom. Interestingly, a cornerstone of these includes self-honesty, and it too requires courage, strength and commitment. Meditate on deciphering your truth.

Capricorn (Dec 21 – Jan 19)

Shifts and changes in your public and professional life and how these reflect your vision of what constitutes a successful life, are features of this eclipse season. What actions do you need to take and choices you need to make to feel more secure and nurtured? The answer probably includes harmonizing with those determined by the significant other(s) in your life.

Aquarius (Jan 19 – Feb 19)

A transformational process is a destined feature of these back-to-back eclipses. They are destined to activate a quest for new opportunities. Achieving a new sense of abundance is indicated. Perhaps you feel you deserve a raise or a promotion. The key is to acknowledge yourself, yet also be open to support from your fans.

Pisces (Feb 19 – Mar 20)

Changes in your relationship life are destined due to these eclipses. While this invariably includes others, the relationship is with your own self as well and includes deciphering how you can be more creatively fulfilled. The basic answer includes new strategies and approaches. Once you have determined what these are, begin without delay.
